

CLAIMS

1. A method for application development comprising:

expressing database calls within an application as tokenized SQL

5 statements;

initially processing the tokenized SQL statements in a database independent manner as embedded SQL; and moving to production mode by processing the tokenized SQL statements to create callable stored procedures that reside within a database management system.

10